The Guide

Building on the success of previous years, this year's guide will provide insight and comment from artists, art professionals and art students – perfect for profiling and promoting your degree show.

The easy-to-read flip book will be distributed to a combined network of artists, curators, collectors, critics, galleries, arts organisations and niche communities, as well as students and the higher education sector. This guide is uniquely placed to position your show in the professional arena.

Focused on encouraging visits, the guide will highlight the UK's most innovative fine and applied arts courses, present new talent and help collectors find something they love at an affordable price. With insights from across the sector into how to support up-and-coming artists.

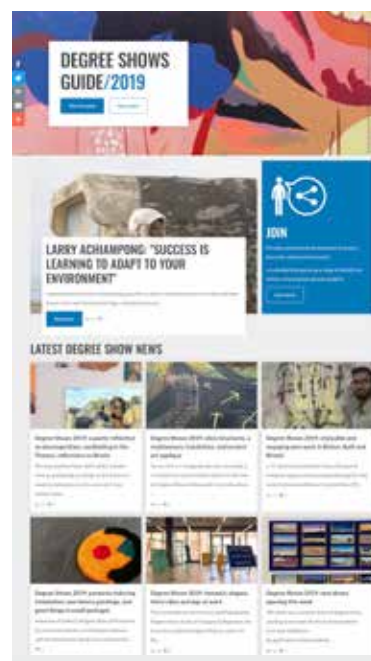

a-n Degree Shows Guide 2019

a-n.co.uk/degree-shows

This year's guide will be part of a dynamic digital resource, with regularly posted additional content focussed on the needs of graduating students and updates on degree shows as they open around the UK.

Integrated with a wide range of social media, this cross-platform approach ensures visually rich and regularly updated content about degree shows reaches a wide audience.

Distribution

The guide will be distributed directly to a-n's membership of over 25,000, a-n's visual arts interested networks through a-n News and to a combined social media following of 162,000+ across Twitter, Facebook, Instagram and LinkedIn.

Our digital resource on www.a-n.co.uk/degree-shows, featuring the guide, provides a focal point for supplementary content, putting a spotlight on shows as they open and keeping attention on degree shows throughout May, June and July.

Social media activity will help to create a buzz around the shows encouraging reviews, tweets, interaction, conversation and visits. Instagram takeovers present first hand coverage, tweets alert audiences to opening dates, Facebook networks our content to a much broader regionally targeted audience.

Prominent positioning on a-n.co.uk with 2.1 million pageviews per year.

As in previous years the publication will be distributed across multiple sites.

Two dedicated mailings to our membership in May and June with key content from the Degrees Shows Guide 2019 and social media coverage highlighted as shows open across the country.
